This image shows the original image simply 'flipped' (horizontally). For a low resolution image this would be fine but for a more detailed image this is not a suitable solution because on closer inspection you will note everything is backwards.

This final image has been properly edited to not only accommodate the left to right 'flip' but also all the individual elements have been corrected so it appears to truly be a picture of a right-hand-drive vehicle. Note the airbag switch has also been removed from beside the radio as this feature is not available in Australia.
